Course Introduction

Course Description

Development of integrated English language skills emphasizing foundation knowledge of practical spoken English to improve daily life communications in various familiar situations

Course Objectives

1. Apply vocabulary and basic English grammar rules in the forms of various types of phrases and sentences correctly in different simple communication contexts such as talking and writing about selves, families, friends, and their surroundings;
2. Make statements, ask and respond to questions, social exchanges, and simple texts on familiar everyday life topics

University Policy for Blended Learning

What is blended learning?

It is an educational methodology that blends online and digital components with face-to-face instruction.

1. Learning environment - in a classroom, online platforms, or outside a classroom
2. Learning resources - use a variety of technologies, applications, or online resources
3. Learning activities - active learning activities
4. Learning mode - synchronous and asynchronous
5. Assessment & evaluation - focus more on formative & alternative assessments

According to the university blended policy, the EC1 class management is as follows.

- The EC1 class is activity- based. This means students will be assigned to watch some video clips and study grammar structures before going to the classroom (flipped learning).
- LMS is the learning resource where students are assigned to do self-study before coming to class.
- In a classroom, students do activities (speaking, reading, writing, listening, games, etc.) related to the assigned video lessons.
- A teacher facilitates in-class activities and gives feedback on language used (grammar structures, pronunciation, etc.) during the activities.

Chapter 1:

Learning Outcomes

After learning this chapter, students should be able to identify parts of speech in sentences

identify types of sentences (simple, compound, complex) identify sentence problems (fragment, run-on, comma splice)

correct sentence problems

The EC1 Academy

1. Parts of Speech Review

When you learn new words, it is important to learn the part of speech of the words as well. It helps you to understand word functions, sentence structure, and meanings.

Noun – a person, place, or thing which can be a subject or an object of a sentence

Pronoun – replaces a noun, or refers to a noun that is mentioned earlier

Verb – shows actions or links the subject with adjectives

Adjective – describes a noun or pronoun

Adverb – describes a verb, an adjective, or another adverb

Preposition – identifies place and time, shows the relationship of a noun to another word

Conjunction – joins words, clauses, or sentences together and shows how they are connected

Interjection – expresses a strong feeling and reaction

One word can have more than one part of speech or meaning.

For example

I made some mistakes (n.) on my previous exam.

You can't mistake (v.) the campus computer lab - it has a bright red front door.

Martin gave me a very nice birthday present (n.).

I have to present (v.) about my high school experience.

When you learn new words, you should learn other parts of speech to expand your vocabulary.

For example

1. enthusiasm (n.) enthusiastic (adj.) enthusiastically (adv.)
2. communicate (v.) communication (n.) communicative (adj.) communicatively (adv.)

3. develop (v.) development (n.) developmental (adj.) developmentally (adv.)
4. interest (n.) interest (v.) interesting (adj.) interestingly (adv.)
5. educate (v.) education (n.) educational (adj.) educationally (adv.)

Exercise 1.1 Instructions: Identify the parts of speech of the underlined words: noun, pronoun, verb, adjective, adverb, conjunction, preposition.

For example

__noun____ We use textbooks to study for our exams.

_____ 1. I enjoy attending lectures on various subjects.

_____ 2. Many students participate actively in class discussions.

_____ 3. The campus library offers a wide range of resources for students.

_____ 4. The students attended a workshop on effective time management.

_____ 5. The professor explained the complex topic using visual aids.

_____ 6. Students must submit their assignments before the deadline.

_____ 7. Emma studied diligently to achieve good grades in her exams.

_____ 8. The students are taught about the importance of teamwork.

_____ 9. I am interested in pursuing a degree in computer science.

_____ 10. Students can choose to study abroad or pursue internships to enhance their academic experience.

_____ 11. The students listened attentively during the lecture.

_____ 12. The professor assigned a challenging research project to the students.

_____ 13. The students enthusiastically organized a cultural event to celebrate diversity.

_____ 14. Jonathan carefully proofreads his essay before submitting it.

_____ 15. The lecturer explained the concept clearly, but some students still had questions.

_____ 16. The course syllabus outlines the topics covered throughout the semester.

_____ 17. The professor explained the concept using real-life examples.

_____ 18. The university offers a wide range of extracurricular activities for students.

_____ 19. The professor provided constructive feedback on the students' presentations.

_____ 20. Many students apply for scholarships to alleviate the financial burden of their education.

Exercise 1.2 Instructions: Check the underlined words' parts of speech of each sentence whether it is correct (C) or incorrect (I). If it is incorrect, provide the correct word.

For example

I have been studying hardly for my upcoming exam.

a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is __hard___.

1. The professor deliver a fascinating lecture yesterday.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
2. The students eagerly participate in the extracurricular activities.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
3. Many students are interesting in pursuing higher education.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
4. I'm excited about the new course that I'm taking this semester.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
5. The lecture was so boring that some of the students fall asleep.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
6. The university cafeteria offers a variety of meals for students to choose from.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
7. My roommate and I get along good and often study together.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
8. We have to careful proofread our essays before submitting them.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
9. The professor gave us clear instructions on how to complete the assignment.
   a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.
10. The professor explained the subject thorough during the lecture.
    a. correct b. incorrect - the correct word is _____.

2. Types of Sentences Review

After learning the types of sentences from the LMS, do the exercise below.

Exercise 2.1 Instructions: Identify the following sentences whether each of them is simple, compound, or complex.

1. Students shouldn't eat or sleep in a classroom.

a. Simple b. Compound c. Complex

2. If you have a problem with your study, you can ask for help.

a. Simple b. Compound c. Complex

3. My friends and I have an early class on Mondays.

a. Simple b. Compound c. Complex

12. You must not forget to write your name, student ID, and section when you submit your assignments.

a. Simple b. Compound c. Complex

3. Sentence Problems Review

After learning the types of sentences from the LMS, do the exercise below.

Exercise 3.1 Instructions: Identify each sentence problem whether it is fragment, run-on, or comma splice.

1. A friend of mine likes to eat in a fancy restaurant I like street food.

   a. Fragment b. Run-on c. Comma splice

2. I think I ate too much, I feel a little sick.

   a. Fragment b. Run-on c. Comma splice

3. Because Steve doesn't like English.

   a. Fragment b. Run-on c. Comma splice

Exercise 3.2 Instructions: Read the following passage and identify sentence problems (fragment, run-on, or comma splice).

In 2020, it was the first time that I had to study online. Because of COVID-19 pandemic. I felt excited about online learning I had never studied online before I knew no one in my class. The first subject that I studied online was English, it was very difficult because the teacher talked very fast, and she didn't explain in Thai at all. I was shocked and confused. I didn't know what to do. Luckily, when the teacher asked whether we had any questions. One of my classmates asked the teacher to briefly explain the grammar point to us in Thai, I could catch up with the lesson.

* Note - frag = fragment, RO = run-on, CS = comma splice

Now, correct those sentence problems and write a revised version of the paragraph below

4. After class

Next week, we are going to have a look at Past simple and Past continuous. Please access the LMS to watch the video about past simple and past continuous before our next class.

3. Reading: Jigsaw Reading Group Activity

Instructions:

1. Get in a group of 6 people.
2. The teacher will give each group cards of gift giving in different countries (attached below).
3. In a group, each student should select ONE country.
4. After each group member chooses a country, find the other students in class who chose the same country and get into a new group.
5. Closely read the card of the selected country and discuss the answers to the following questions:

    Q 1. On what occasion do people in this country give gifts?

    Q 2. Is there a specific manner/tip about giving/receiving gifts?

    Q 3. What should people be aware of if they want to give gifts?

6. After that, students go back to their original group and share the answers for their country in their group.

Gift Giving around the World

China

Many times, a Chinese person will refuse a gift two or three times before finally accepting it. This does not mean that they do not appreciate the gift. It is rather a way of expressing modesty and good manners.

In China, the major gift-giving occasions are birthdays, the Spring Festival (Chinese New Year), and the Mid-Autumn Festival.

If receiving a gift, there may be an expectation for a reciprocal gift or favour. This sense of reciprocity is something that most Chinese people have learned since they were children, and they are sensitive to the value of favours and gifts. It is common for Chinese people to use gifts to express their appreciation for favours they have received.

Examples of inappropriate gifts include knives, scissors, or letter openers, which may symbolise the severance of a relationship; clocks (in many Chinese dialects, the phrase "give clock" sounds the same as "see off into death"); handkerchiefs, which are associated with crying and funerals; and items packaged in sets of four unless it is a set of two pairs.

Russia

The value of gifts varies depending on the relationship and the context. It is advisable to avoid giving expensive gifts that may be perceived as bribes. In general, gifts are given at the end of a transaction or meeting. This also helps reduce any misperception of wrongdoing.

It is inappropriate to gift flowers bundled in even numbers; yellow flowers, lilies or carnations (which are associated with funerals).

Gifts may not always be opened in front of the giver, and some Russians may initially refuse the offer of a gift. It is best to downplay the gift when presenting it. If bringing a gift to a Russian colleague's home, for example, most Russians say that it is just a little something for the house, the spouse, or the children. If the gift is refused, either in a business or household context, the giver generally places it on the table before leaving and says something that minimises the gesture.

Egypt

Gifts are sometimes given to the close relatives of important professional connections to celebrate important events in their lives, such as college graduations or weddings.

Many Muslims would find it a remarkably nice gesture, for example, if a non-Muslim foreigner sent them a greeting at the beginning of Ramadan.

Egyptians build and maintain their personal and professional networks partly by exchanging gifts, so gifts are common, especially in long-term relationships. Suppliers and vendors typically send gifts, such as calendars and items with their logos on them, to their clients.

If you are invited to the home of a Muslim family, do not bring alcohol unless you are sure that they drink.

Ghana

Gifts should be wrapped and presented with the right hand. The recipient may or may not open the gift immediately.

Gifts are very important to business relationships. Many businesses show appreciation at the end of the year by giving their customers, vendors, clients, and other business associates Christmas hampers (gift baskets which have an assortment of gifts, sometimes including the company's own products).

Multinational corporations usually have stricter restrictions about gift giving than local companies.

It is also common to give a donation for a funeral when a colleague or colleague's family member dies.

USA

For the Americans, gift-giving is so much fun and brings enormous joy to both the giver and the receiver. There are some occasions in which you may need to prepare gifts for one or more people, for example, on birthdays, Anniversaries, Weddings, Graduations, Special Holidays, Christmas, etc.

Americans may, however, give gifts to coworkers, colleagues, and customers during the holiday season (late December). It is common for bosses to give gifts to executive assistants and other subordinates at this time.

Americans generally do not bring gifts to customers when meeting for the first time or as a thank-you for doing business together.

When a gift is given to a person from the U.S., the giver might not receive one in return.

Americans often open the gift right away, in front of the giver, so that they can see what it is and express thanks for the item.

France

Good taste is imperative when giving gifts in France; timing is also important. In general, the French avoid giving gifts at the first business meeting.

When invited to someone's home, most French bring a gift and present it before the meal or party.

Good gifts reflect an appreciation of knowledge and the arts, such as books and music. Gifts should not insult the intelligence of French associates. For example, a biography may be a better choice than a more simplistic book.

Giving gifts featuring a company's logo can be considered in poor taste.

When invited to someone's home, flowers are generally appropriate but avoid chrysanthemums (used for funerals), red roses (exchanged between lovers and very good friends), and carnations (thought to bring bad luck). Fine chocolates or champagne are also appropriate gifts.

Chapter 4: Been There Done That

Learning Outcomes

After learning this chapter, students should be able to

1. differentiate between past simple and present perfect from the assigned video(s)
2. use past simple and present perfect appropriately in different situations.
3. apply the use of past simple and present perfect through speaking activities.

1. Speaking: A Wake-up Call

Activity: A Wake-up Call (Pair Work)

Focus: Present Perfect, Past Simple, Past Continuous

Instructions

In this activity, students are required to pair up and take turns practicing the conversation using Past Simple & Present Perfect for experience. After finishing the practice, they then analyze and later brainstorm about the differences between two tenses and how to use them correctly.

A Wake-Up Call

A: Hey, I heard you were in a car accident. Are you okay?

B: Yes, luckily, I'm fine, but it was a wake-up call for me. I've been more cautious on the road lately.

A: What happened exactly?

B: Well, I was driving down the highway when another car suddenly cut in front of me. I couldn't react in time and ended up rear-ending them. It was a scary moment, and I realized how important it is to stay alert.

A: That sounds frightening. Did you report it to the police?

B: Yes, I did. They arrived at the scene and took all the necessary information. I was glad nobody got seriously hurt.

A: Were there any witnesses?

B: Thankfully, there were a couple of witnesses who saw the whole thing. They provided their contact information, so that should help with insurance claims and determining fault.

A: Have you contacted your insurance company?

B: Absolutely. I notified my insurance company immediately after the accident. They advised me to gather all the necessary documentation, such as photos of the damage, and provide them with a detailed account of what happened.

A: Have you taken your car to a mechanic yet?

B: Yes, I've already taken my car to a trusted mechanic for a thorough inspection. They assessed the damage and provided me with an estimate for the repairs. I'm hoping it won't be too costly.

A: I'm glad you're taking all the necessary steps. Remember, it's crucial to follow up on any symptoms or discomfort you might have, even if they seem minor. Sometimes injuries from accidents can take time to manifest.

B: Absolutely, you're right. I'm keeping an eye on any physical changes and will seek medical attention if needed. It's better to be safe than sorry.

A: Just a friendly reminder, now that you've had this experience, it's crucial to be extra cautious on the road. Don't forget to buckle up, obey traffic laws, and maintain a safe distance from other vehicles. Your safety should always come first.

B: Thank you for the reminder. I've learned my lesson and will definitely be more vigilant from now on. It's important not only for my own safety but also for the well-being of others on the road.

2. Reading: My Unforgettable Trip to the River

Exercise 2.1 Instructions: Scan through the passage and underline sentences with present perfect tense.

My Unforgettable Trip to the River

I will never forget the day I went to the Zambezi River. It started out as just an ordinary trip. I never expected that within a few hours, I would be in great danger! When I was 18, I went to the Zambezi River with my family. The sun was setting, and we were nearing the end of the tour one evening when something hit the boat. I fell into the water, and suddenly everything went dark. I was trapped inside something. I managed to free one hand and felt around. My hand touched a crocodile's nose. It was only then that I realized I was underwater. My upper body was actually in the crocodile's mouth! I tried to move as much as I could, and when it opened its mouth, I managed to swim away. Just seconds later, it dragged me underwater again. I remember looking up at the surface of the water and wondering who could hold their breath the longest. Suddenly, the crocodile let go of me. By chance, a medical team was nearby, and they helped me get to a hospital. Meanwhile, the crocodile quietly disappeared.

I believe, though, that I have encountered it once more. Two years later, I went down the Zambezi again. Being there reminded me of the first time. Then, as we passed the same spot in the river, a massive crocodile suddenly appeared. I screamed so loudly that those with me said they had never heard anything like it. It went back under the water and vanished into thin air. I'm sure I recognized the same crocodile that had nearly taken my life, and I will never forget that moment as long as I live.

Since that terrifying incident, my life has changed completely. I have never taken a single moment for granted. The experience has taught me to appreciate every breath I take and every opportunity that comes my way. It has made me realize how fragile life is and how important it is to cherish every precious moment. Over the years, I have shared my story with others, hoping to raise awareness about the dangers around us.

Exercise 2.2 Instructions: Read the passage about someone's trip and answer the following questions.

1. Who was/were the main character(s) of the story?

2. Who were other characters in the story (if any)?

3. When did the story happen?

4. Where did the story take place?

5. What happened?

6. How were the character(s) affected by the incident or the experience?

7. Was there any turning point, surprise, or something special?

3. Writing

Exercise 3.1 Instructions: Use the guided questions below and write your own story.

1. Who was/were the main character(s) of the story?

Chapter 5: Trouble is a Friend

Learning Outcomes

After learning this chapter, students should be able to

1. ask for advice about daily life and relationship problems
2. give advice about daily life and relationship problems using different sentence structures
3. listen for gist and specific details
4. listen to infer information from the talk

1. Warm-up

"When you have some problems, do you talk to a friend or to a member of your family? Why?"

2. Asking for and Giving Advice

Asking for Advice	- What do you think I should do (about ...)? - What should I do (about ...)? - What would you suggest I do? - Can/ Could you give me some advice (about ...)?
Giving Advice	- I think you should... - Why don't you...? - If I were you, I would... - Maybe you should ... - I suggest you...	- How about + v. ing ...? - You might try + v. ing ... - I would advise you to... - My advice would be to... - It might be a good idea to ...

For Example

A: I don't feel confident speaking English. What do you think I should do?

B: You might try listening to a short conversation and repeating after the audio many times.

3. Speaking

In this speaking activity, students give the best advice they can using the language expressions they have learned.

Procedure

1. Divide the students into groups of four.
2. Give each group a set of cards.
3. Ask the students to shuffle the cards and place them face down in a pile on the desk.
4. Students take it in turns to pick up a card, read out the situation on the card and ask for advice.
5. The other students then each give a different piece of advice for the situation using the language expressions they have learned.
6. The student with the card listens and awards the card to the person who gives the best advice.
7. The next student then picks up a card and so on.
8. The student with the most cards at the end of the game wins.
9. Afterwards, students tell the class the best advice they were given for each situation.

What should I do if I have to fart when I stay with my roommates?	I have a crush on the guy who usually takes the same GEM car with me. What should I do?
I was bullied by my classmates because I am not beautiful. I am dating a guy now. Should I continue my relationship with him?	I want to improve my English pronunciation. What should I do?

5. Proper _____ planning is crucial in managing public health crises.

4. Reading

Instructions: Read the following essay and answer questions 1-6.

The Potential of Future Pandemics: Being Prepared for Uncertain Times

In today's interconnected world, the possibility of future pandemics cannot be ignored. This essay aims to explore the importance of preparedness and proactive measures in the face of uncertain times. By understanding the potential risks and taking necessary precautions, we can better protect ourselves and our communities.

To begin with, it is crucial to recognize potential risks associated with future pandemics. Factors such as the spread of infectious diseases, increased global travel, and environmental changes contribute to the emergence of pandemics (World Health Organization, 2021). Acknowledging these risks is the first step towards being prepared.

Moreover, governments should prioritize public health education and awareness. Education plays a vital role in pandemic preparedness, and governments and health organizations must focus on disseminating accurate information about preventive measures (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 2020). By raising awareness, individuals can understand and implement necessary precautions to protect themselves and others.

In addition, healthcare systems should be strengthened in many ways to effectively manage future pandemics. They involve investing in healthcare infrastructure, ensuring an adequate supply of medical resources, and providing comprehensive training for healthcare professionals. Strengthening healthcare systems enhances our capacity to respond to outbreaks and provide necessary care to those affected.

Early detection plays a crucial role in containing the spread of future pandemics. Governments should establish robust surveillance systems to monitor potential outbreaks and implement timely response measures (World Health Organization, 2021). This includes rapid testing, efficient contact tracing, and prompt isolation of infected individuals.

Lastly, addressing future pandemics requires international cooperation and collaboration. Governments, researchers, and healthcare professionals must work together by sharing information and resources. International organizations, such as the World Health Organization, play a critical role in coordinating efforts and promoting global collaboration.

In summary, preparing for future pandemics necessitates proactive measures and collaboration at both individual and global levels. By recognizing potential risks, promoting public health education, strengthening healthcare systems, focusing on early detection and response, and fostering international cooperation, we can better protect ourselves and mitigate the impact of future pandemics. Let us remain vigilant, informed, and united in our efforts to create a resilient and prepared society.

1. What is the main purpose of this essay?
    a) To explore the impact of past pandemics
    b) To discuss the importance of global travel
    c) To emphasize the role of public health education in pandemic preparedness
    d) To analyze the effects of environmental changes on pandemics

2. According to the essay, what are some potential factors contributing to future pandemics?
   a) Increased global travel and climate change
   b) Economic fluctuations and political instability
   c) Social media influence and technological advancements
   d) Cultural diversity and demographic shifts

3. What is the importance of raising awareness about preventive measures?
   a) It helps individuals understand the history of pandemics.
   b) It enables governments to control the spread of infectious diseases.
   c) It allows individuals to take necessary precautions to protect themselves and others.
   d) It helps healthcare professionals improve their skills.

4. What does 'They' in paragraph 4 refer to?
   a) healthcare systems
   b) many ways
   c) future pandemics
   d) medical resources

5. Why is early detection crucial in containing the spread of future pandemics?
   a) It helps researchers understand the origins of the pandemic.
   b) It allows governments to enforce strict lockdown measures.
   c) It enables rapid testing, contact tracing, and isolation of infected individuals.
   d) It reduces the severity of symptoms in infected individuals.

6. What is the overall message conveyed in the essay?
   a) Future pandemics are unavoidable and will have severe consequences.
   b) The world should be prepared and take proactive measures to mitigate the impact of future pandemics.
   c) Public health education is irrelevant in pandemic preparedness.
   d) Governments should solely focus on strengthening healthcare systems.

5. Speaking: What Have You Been Doing, Mr. Johnson?

Instructions: Read the conversation between a medical doctor (MD) and a patient (P), Mr. Johnson, and then discuss the conversation within your groups of 4-5 students based on the guide questions 1-5.

At the doctor's office:

MD: Good morning, Mr. Johnson. How can I assist you today?

P: Good morning, Doctor. I've been feeling quite unwell lately, and I'm not sure what's wrong.

MD: I'm sorry to hear that. Can you please describe your symptoms to me?

P: I've been experiencing a persistent cough, fatigue, and occasional fever. I also feel short of breath at times.

MD: I see. How long have you had these symptoms?

P: It's been about a week now, and they seem to be getting worse.

MD: Alright. Based on your symptoms, it's possible that you have contracted a respiratory infection. I'd like to ask a few more questions to gather more information. Have you recently traveled to any areas with known outbreaks?

P: No, I haven't traveled anywhere recently.

MD: Have you been in contact with anyone who has been sick?

P: Yes, my coworker was sick with a similar set of symptoms last week.

MD: That's important information. It's possible that you have been exposed to an infectious respiratory illness. I'd like to conduct a physical examination and run some tests to confirm the diagnosis.

P: Of course, Doctor. I want to know what's causing these symptoms.

MD: Great. I'll listen to your lungs, check your temperature, and perform a few other tests. Meanwhile, it's important to rest, stay hydrated, and practice good hand hygiene to prevent further spread of any potential infection.

P: Thank you, Doctor. I appreciate your help and guidance.

MD: You're welcome. Once we have the test results, we can discuss the treatment plan and any necessary precautions. In the meantime, don't hesitate to reach out if your symptoms worsen or if you have any concerns.

P: I will. Thank you again, Doctor.

MD: You're welcome, Mr. Johnson. We'll figure this out together. Take care and get some rest.

The Guided Questions for the Discussion:

1. What symptoms did the patient describe to the doctor?
2. What possible illness did the doctor suggest based on the patient's symptoms?
3. What additional information did the doctor ask the patient about?
4. What advice did the doctor give to the patient while waiting for test results?
5. How did the doctor reassure the patient and conclude the conversation?

Practice Makes Perfect! Narrative Paragraph Writing

What is a narrative paragraph?

Narrative paragraph is the paragraph that tells a story. A good story should be arranged in a chronological order (the sequences of the events from the beginning to the end).

The Components of a Narrative Paragraph

Generally, a narrative paragraph has a beginning, a middle, and an end. It starts with the main point in the topic sentence and some background information. The middle gives more details about the events which bring about the climax of the story. Finally, the end wraps up the whole story by revealing the outcome or the significance of the story.

A beginning = A topic sentence – introduce what the story is about

A middle = Supporting sentences – tell the story in order of what happen

An end = A concluding sentence – the outcome or significance of the story

In order to make a story interesting, the ending of the story is significant because it shows the change in the narrator's attitude or feeling. It may teach him/her some moral lessons or contribute to a crucial discovery about something. That is how the story is worth reading because it has a purpose.

Coherence

In writing, coherence means there is no single irrelevant detail in a writing work. All sentences must be smoothly connected to each other. The point of view must be cohesive throughout the writing work.

The most common way to organize events in a narrative paragraph is to arrange them in a chronological order. To ensure that readers understand time relationships, the writer needs to use transitions to show how events progress.

Look at the transitions in the chart below. These are connectors that you can use in narrative writing

Transitions

Time Linkers

Adverbs of time (Chronological order)	Prepositions	Linkers used as Adverb clauses
first (second, third, etc.) next finally later now then	after (a moment) at (8:00 a.m.) by (bedtime, then) during (the afternoon) from (then on) until (six o'clock) On January 13, 2021, In 2012, In August 2010,	after as soon as before until when whenever while

*When time clauses/time linkers occur at the beginning of a sentence, they MUST be followed by a comma.

EX Time linker → Last night, we went to the party together.

EX Time clause → When I came back home this evening, it was raining.

A Narrative Paragraph Writing Example

My fear of public speaking

I still remember the day I finally conquered my fear of public speaking. At the beginning of the semester, my English teacher assigned us the daunting task of speaking in front of the class for three minutes, and I worried about it for the next two weeks. I have always been afraid of making a speech in public. I wrote all of my ideas on note cards. I practiced my speech with my notes in front of a mirror, in front of my dog, and in front of my parents. When the day of my speech came, I was ready. As I reached the podium, I looked at my audience and smiled. Then I looked down at my notes. At that moment, I realized that I had the wrong information. These were the notes for my biology test, not the information about my speech. I closed my eyes and took a deep breath. Without further hesitation, I began the speech. To my surprise, the words flowed from my mouth. Three minutes later, it was over. Everyone applauded my speech that day, and I left the podium feeling like a winner. I was proud of myself that I could overcome my fear of public speaking. After that day, I have learned that having a lot of practice can help me gain confidence in making a speech in public.

Adapted from Oshima, A., & Hogue, A. (2014). Longman Academic Writing Series, Level 3: Essays. Pearson.

How to write a topic sentence

There are many ways to state your main idea in a narrative paragraph.

1. I will never forget …(topic)……

    - I will never forget the first time I got lost in New York City.
    - I will never forget the day I fell in love.

2. I still remember …(topic)…… …..

    - I still remember the first day at my high school.
    - I still remember the funniest trip with my best friend.

3. .. (topic)…….. happened when ……..

    - My most embarrassing moment happened when I was in primary school.

How to write supporting sentences

In a narrative paragraph, the supporting sentences are about your story. You write about events in the order that they happen. You can use these following guided questions to tell your story.

What happened?

When did it happen?

Who was there?

What was going around you during the event?

How did it end?

How to write a concluding sentence

A concluding sentence is NOT the end of your story but how the story affects your feelings, what you have learned from the story, or how the story changes your life/ attitudes/ or perspectives

For example

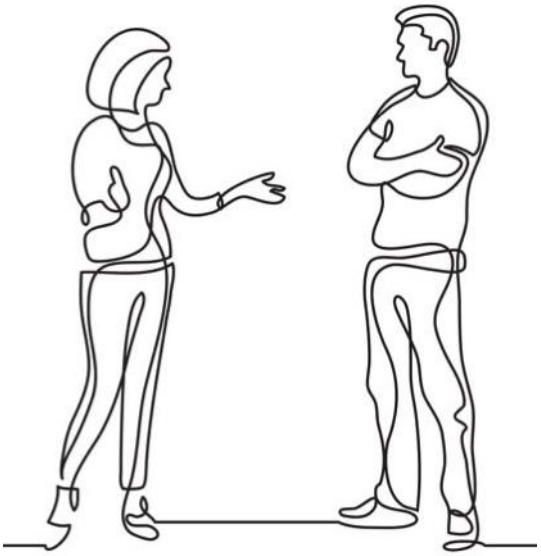

- This story took place over twenty years ago, but every time that I see a department store, I am reminded of that terrified little boy.
- I was very proud of myself that I could overcome my fear of singing on the stage.

Practice Makes Perfect! Discussion Skills

1.WHAT IS A DISCUSSION?

Simply put, to 'discuss' a topic means to talk about it with a purpose and objective. A discussion is a conversation during which questions and answers are exchanged with the purpose of exchanging ideas, opinions and thoughts about a particular topic.

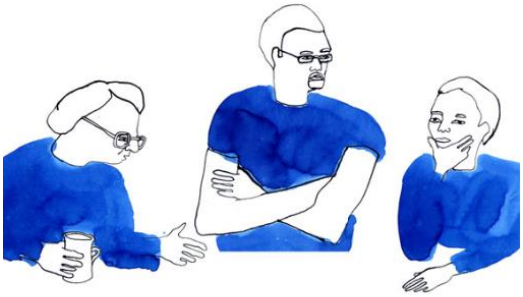

2. REQUIRED SKILLS

To have an effective discussion you must be able to do many things and have many skills. Most importantly, you must first understand that disagreeing with other people and expressing those disagreements in a polite manner is good; it leads to an exchange of ideas, increased knowledge, and personal development. You must not be afraid to disagree with other people and tell them why, but always do so with respect. If you understand this, then you can focus on developing the skills necessary to be able to do so and be an effective participant in any discussion.

Some discussions are impromptu (happening on the spur of the moment; no preparation time), and some discussions require research, a lot of thought and preparation (a formal meeting). Regardless of the kind of discussion, you will be required to use all of these skills to some extent:

1. Understand, analyse, and critically think about the topic of discussion
2. Develop ideas, thoughts or opinions about the topic
3. Be able to express and explain your ideas (evidence to support your ideas)
4. Ask for and welcome the opinion of others
5. Understand, acknowledge and analyse the opinion of others
6. Express agreement or disagreement with the opinion of others
7. Ask and answer questions to exchange ideas
8. Reevaluate your opinion

3. CRITICAL THINKING

You must understand your topic. Research it if you can. Develop your opinions and ideas and find evidence to support your ideas. Listen to and analyse the opinion of others and reevaluate your own opinion after doing so. Analyse yourself. These critical thinking skills are beyond the scope of this course, but are necessary to be effective in a discussion.

4. Vocabulary

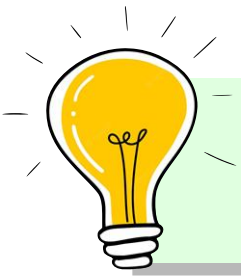

Combining the critical thinking skills above with verbal skills and proper use of vocabulary will result in you being an effective contributor to any discussion. It will result in you having more credibility, being more persuasive, and being respected by the others in the group. Your ideas will not be important if you cannot explain them fully. You want to know what others think, so you must be able to ask them. Everyone thinks differently, so you must be able to express and explain why you agree or disagree with someone. A discussion is a form of conversation during which you must be able to ask and answer general questions as well. It is these skills that this unit will focus on.

5. EXPRESSING YOUR OPINION

In a discussion you will be required to give your opinion. Either someone will ask you directly or you will have an opportunity to volunteer your thoughts and ideas. There are many ways to do it and a lot of different vocabulary you can use.

Here are some examples:

1. In my opinion, _____
2. As far as I am concerned, _____
3. I think (feel, believe) that _____
4. I suggest that _____
5. I would say that _____
6. I would like to point out that _____
7. In my experience, _____
8. It is my opinion that _____
9. My opinion (belief, view, thought) is that _____
10. Personally, I think that _____

...because _____(explain your reasons)_____

6. ASK FOR THE OPINION OF OTHERS

In a discussion, you will want to know what others think, so you must be able to ask them to explain their ideas. There are many ways to do it and a variety of vocabulary words and phrases you can use. Here are some examples:

- What do you think about….?
- What's your opinion on …?
- Do you think …..?
- How do you feel about…..?
- Please share your perspective on…..

NOTE:

"AND YOU?" IS NOT A GOOD WAY TO ASK FOR AN OPINION UNLESS YOU FOLLOW IT WITH ADDITIONAL PHRASING.

7. STATING AGREEMENT OR DISAGREEMENT

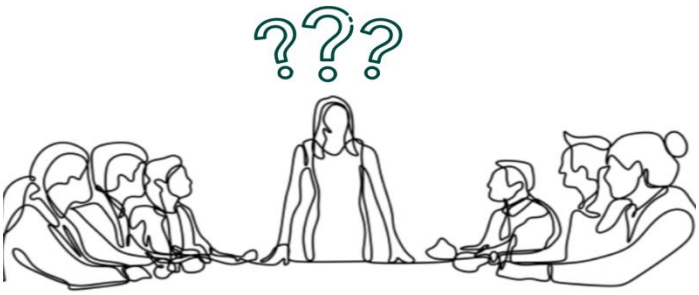

Do you agree with someone? Do you completely agree with everything they say, or just some of what they say? Do you think you agree, but are not sure? Maybe you want to hear more support or evidence. Are you certain you disagree? How do you say you disagree in a polite way? Expressing agreement or disagreement can take many forms depending on how much you agree or disagree or how certain you are. Look at the information below:

AGREEMENT PHRASES	DISAGREEMENT PHRASES
• I (quite) agree. • You've got a very good point there. • I totally agree. • I couldn't agree more. • I think you're absolutely right. • Exactly!	• But don't you think that …? • I take your point, but … • Yes that may be true, but…. • I wouldn't say that. • I see what you mean, but … • But what about …?

There are many ways to express your agreement and/or disagreement. Before you can agree or disagree, you must first understand the other person's opinion. You must respect it. But you DO NOT have to agree with it. It is always very polite to say that you understand and respect someone else's opinion, even if you do not agree.

8. CHANGING THE TOPIC

- Can we now turn to ____
- Can we move on to the next point?
- I'd like to move on to ____
- Moving on to ____
- The next aspect I'd like to consider is ____
- I want to turn to ____
- The next point is ____
- Another interesting point is ____

9. Do's and Don'ts

Do's	Don'ts
✓ Listen to the subject carefully ✓ Give others a chance to speak ✓ Speak politely and pleasantly ✓ Respect contribution from other members ✓ Disagree politely and agree with what is right ✓ Summarise the scission if the group has not reached a conclusion	• Argue and shout during the discussion • Look at the evaluators or a particular group members • Talk irrelevant things • Pose negative body gestures like touching the nose, leaning back on the chair, knocking the table with a pen, etc. • Display low self confidence with shaky voice and trembling hands • Try to dominate the discussion • Put others in an embarrassing situation by asking them to speck when they don't want

Practice Makes Perfect! Presentation Skills

1. How to prepare for your oral presentation

Objective

Before you start to prepare a presentation, you should ask yourself: "Why am I making this presentation?" Do you need to inform, to persuade, to train, or to sell? Your objective should be clear in your mind. If it is not clear in your mind, it cannot possibly be clear to your audience.

Audience

"Who am I making this presentation to?" Sometimes this will be clear, but not always. You should try to inform yourself. How many people? Who are they? Business people? Professional people? Political people? Students? Experts or non-experts? Will it be a small, medium-sized group or a large group of 400 students? How much do they know already, and what will they expect from you?

Place

"Where am I making this presentation?" In a small classroom or a large conference hall? What facilities and equipment are available? What are the seating arrangements?

Time and length

"When am I making this presentation and how long will it be?" Will it be 15 minutes or 1 hour? Just before lunch, when your audience will be hungry, or just after lunch, when your audience will be sleepy?

Method

How should I make this presentation?" What approach should you use? Formal or informal? Lots of visual aids or only a few? Will you include some interesting stories and humour to catch your audiences' attention?

Content

"What should I say?" Now you must decide exactly what you want to say. First, you should brainstorm your ideas. You will no doubt discover many ideas that you want to include in your presentation. But you must be selective. You should include only information that is relevant to your audience and your objective. You should exclude all other ideas. You also need to create a title for your presentation (if you have not already been given a title). The title will help you to focus on the subject. And you will prepare your visual aids, if you have decided to use them. But remember, in general, less is better than more (a little is better than a lot). You can always give additional information during the questions after the presentation.

2. Presentation structure

A well-organised presentation with a clear structure is easier for the audience to follow. You should organise the points you wish to make in a logical order. Most presentations are organised in three parts which are introduction, body, and conclusion.

Introduction	• Greeting the audience • Introducing your group members and/or yourself • Calling for your audiences' attention • Introducing your topic • What is your product? • Informing the overview of your presentation • The structure and sequence of your presentation • What will you present first? • What will include in your presentation?
Main Transition
Body	• Present your content • What do you want to tell your audience about your product? Why? • What is your product? - product description • How to use your product? - product instructions • Who will need your product? • When will they use your product? give reason too. • How much does it cost? And why?
Main Transition

Conclusion	• Giving a 'take-away' message • Why/How is your presentation important to your audience? • Why do they have to be interested in what you just presented to them? • Giving a short message to convince your audience to be interested in your product. • Thanking your audiences • Asking for questions

3. What is a main transition?

A main transition or signpost is used to give a signal to your audience when you want to move to your next topic in your presentation. In other words, it helps your audiences to know where they are, the structure of your presentation, and what is coming next. They know because you tell them by using signposts. For example, during your introduction, you should tell your audience what the structure of your presentation will be. You might say something like this:

By using - We'll start by

- Then, we'll move on to
- After that, we'll discuss
- Lastly, we'll have a Q7A session

Your audience will be able to understand what you present more clearly because they can see the structure of your presentation by the use of the signposts.

Example:

We'll start by describing the current problems (about these products) we are facing these days. Then, we'll move on to introduce our products and explain the features that are needed to be improved. After that, we'll discuss how our products will make our life easier. Lastly, we'll have a Q&A session. If you have any questions, please wait until the end of our presentation.
